Jealousy Believed Reason For Double Tragedy at Camp-bell River

Courtenay. B.C. May 26.—
Shooting out of the porthole of a gas boat at Cape Mudge, Campbell River to-day, Ernest Moses, an Indian, killed his wife Emma and then turning the 44.40 riffe on himself, injured himself fatally so that he died in an hour.

The victims of the double tragedy are super-schand, chemainus, Indians who had gore up to Campbell River for the fishing. Moses never spoke after the shooting, and the only cause that can be surmised is jealousy.

On May 2 Moses came up from Kuper Island in a gas boat, closely followed by his wife with her mother. The two boats were lying tied together when there was a report from the porthole of the cabin of the husband's boat, and his wife fell dead with a shot in the right breast.

When the police took possession of the boat a 44.60 rifle was found with one spent shell and another in the barrel.

When Rev. Dr. Francis Edward Clark was a young minister in charge of the Williston Congregational—Church at while general lethargy prevailed in Canada with regard to town planning, two port cities, Montreal and Vancouver, are actively considering their problems in a comprehensive way.

"It can be said without fear of contradition that Vancouver is the first city of its size and importance in Canada to that Vancouver is the first city of its size and importance in Canada to undertake the solution of its problems in an entirely comprehensive and scientific way," said Mr. Seymour, pointing out that Vancouver and Point Grey were first to take full advantage of the town planning act passed by the Legislature of British Columbia.

Other municipalities were following suit, he said.

Touching upon the close relationship between town planning and methods. London, May 26.—Four Canadian appeals, all Vancouver cases, have been heard by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council here and in two Judgment was reserved and the remainder were dismissed.

The Captain J. A. Cates Tug and Wharfage Company Limited, was unsuccessful in an appeal from a judgment of the British Columbia Court of Appeal in fayor if the Franklin Pire Insurance Company of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. The appellant claimed $30,000 under insurance policies for the sinking of its tug Radius at the entrance to Fisst Narrows at Vancouver, on August 26, 1925. The company contended the vessel was a contsructive total loss; but the insurance company contested this claim, while admitting liability as a partial loss for about haif the money.

ON TUESDAY THE TIMES REPROduced an interview with Dr. J. Russell Smith, internationally-celebrated geographer and economist, which took the form of a leading article in the June issue of The American Magazine. The subject dealt with was the future of the Pacific Northwest, including that part of British Columbia in which the cities of Victoria and Vancouver are situated, from the point of view of commerce and general develop-

Dr. Smith expects that in the region to which he refers American civilization in many ways will reach its maximum. "Yes," says he, "I expect it will outstrip New York, overcoming the advantage which the metropolis has had of an early start." The area in question-about fifty miles by 400 milesembraces the Pacific Coast of Oregon and Washington in the Puget Sound-Willamette Valley region, "where are located the cities of Seattle, Portland, Tacoma, Everett, Bellingham, and a few others, including Vancouver and Victoria." Dr. Smith then goes on to say that the population of this area is now about one million; but "it will almost certainly increase to five or six, perhaps ten, millions-a thriving land of cities in the midst of dairy farms and a rich garden agriculture, such as we find in the best parts to England-and Belgium."

From this forecast of the Pacific Northwest's for ture Dr. Smith passes on to the reasons upon which he bases his conclusions. In this regard he mentions Dr. Ellsworth Huntington's observations in the study of the part which climate plays in the making of civilization and proceeds:

"Dr. Huntington's main conclusion, in brief, is is: A man feels more inclined to be active, and il do more physical work, at a temperature of about degrees (55 to 70 degrees) than when it is colder warmer. He also states that man does his best brain or warmer. He also states that man does his best brain work when the outdoor temperature is about 40 degrees. Study the temperature charts of Seattle and Portland, and you will be struck by the fact that in Winter the temperature there is right for the maximum of mental activity; in Summer it is right for the maximum of physical activity.

"Another of Dr. Huntington's conclusions is that man needs a moist climate to perform at his bestman needs a moist climate to perform at his bestman the climate here (in the Northwest) is moist. Also t is changeable. And changes in temperature wake sen up, energize them, and make them want to do hings."

From this point Dr. Smith draws upon the events the past to support the effects of climate. He recalls that during the Great War, when the United States was striving to build ships with all possible speed, "at Philadelphia, the sun . . . produced so much heat that, at times, the men had to rest. But heat didn't interrupt work in the shipyards of the Pacific Northwest." The experience of Victoria and Vancouver, of course, not to mention that of the yards on Puget Sound, amply bears out the truth

Dr. Smith also enumerates other outstanding advantages possessed by the section with which he is dealing in such an optimistic fashion. He pro-

"To be sure, there are numerous other reasons apart from climate that lead one to predict an unrivaled future for this part of the country. It is aspiented land for agriculture. It is accessible for trade. The Panama Canal offers transportation facilities. As to mechanical energy, the Cascades and the Coast Range, along with the Rockies, give the cities access to many millions of horsepower of hydroelectric energy. Nowhere in Europe nor in the Eastern United States is there any location for water power resource that rivals it."

In his concluding observations Dr. Smith says that a million dollars invested in the next twenty disclose the technique for a tree-crop agriculture, while he contends that the creations and discoveries which would be made would be worth many millions the succeeding twenty years and billions after that.

The value of Dr. Smith's article to Victoria can not be overestimated. It will attract attention to this section of the Northwest as no other form of publicity could possibly do. It is timely indeed and it ought to cheer even our most confirmed pessimists.

OUR MOVING WORLD

MANY READERS OF THE TIMES NO doubt were surprised to see in yesterday's issue a picture of the meeting between Captain Charles Lindbergh and United States Ambassador Myron T. Herrick in Paris last Sunday morning after the young aviator had flown from New York to the French

It is one thing to set a camera in front of a subject and take a photograph which can be reproduced in an hour or so on ordinary sensitized paper and quite another thing to take every speck of detail from that picture and send it through the air. Yesthis is what was done in Paris on Sunday. It is a mystery to the layman; but the process can be compared to some extent with the making of a phonograph record. The human voice may be recorded and retained on an object which will reproduce it indefinitely. In the case of the photograph sent by wireless and over the wires the electrical impulses are recorded photographically. That is to say, there is an electrical reproduction of the photograph in its lights and shades.

The illustration which appeared in The Times yesterday was taken in the ordinary way and developed in the ordinary way. After that it was literally taken to pieces, its myriad specks being sent in waves, just as energy is transmitted through the air, to New York. With the whole "shipment" received and all the dots and dashes and strokes once more assetabled, the process was repeated again over the wires connecting New York with San Francisco. No more ing was necessary, however, at that stage; the picture had taken its original form and was ready to be sent to The Victoria Times by aeroplane. Fortyfive minutes after its arrival in this office it was ready for use in metal form.

This accomplishment opens up an interesting vista. Not so very long ago the world went through what is known in technical parlance as the "woodcut age." After this came photo engraving and the copper plate for fine work at a slow pace on smoothsurfaced paper. Finally came the solution of illustrating newspapers with what is known as "coarse-screen" half-tones capable of producing excellent results on the commonest grades of paper at many thousands of impressions an hour. All this required the clear "silver print"-the photograph with all its detail in sharp relief. But just as the engraver's art has expanded, so has science devised a way to send photographs through the air in what already is remarkable for detail.

What of the future? The accomplishment which now has passed into history will be just as commonplace in a few years as non-stop flights across the Atlantic and other oceans in aeroplanes and dirigibles: Soon will dawn the day when events taking place in Furope, in Asia, and in the remote regions of the earth will be recorded in picture on the day of their occurrence. This already is near, for the illustration which appeared on the front page of The Times yesterday was published in San Francisco on Monday-twenty-four hours after the photograph was

Nor are these developments of significance only to the purely technical. Who knows what influence upon the public mind may be wrought by illustrations of incidents that accompany the pen picture a few hours after they have taken place? The written word conveys much. News-gathering agencies have established reputations for reliability which enables the newspaper reader to accept their reports with little or no question. But there is nothing quite as convincing as a pictorial proof.

It may be said that telephotographic science leaves much to be desired. That is true. But we are not a very long way from the old tintype process. A quarter of a century ago the technical expert who dared to suggest that a photograph could be taken and a cut—or "block" as the etched printing surface used to be called-prepared for the press in fifteen minutes would have been dubbed a dreamer.

The world continues to move to the amazement of mankind generally.

SOVIET POULTRY EXHIBITS From The Ottawa Citizen

Soviet Russia is sending a delegation of thirty authorities on poultry to the World's Poultry Congress, which is to be held in Ottawa at the end of July. It is stated that the delegation will bring along five rels of motion picture films which will illustrate the advance of the poultry industry in the Soviet republic.

vance of the poulity industry in the Soviet republic.

It will be interesting to see whether the hens lay any better under socialism than under capitalism. Egg-laying has been increased in Canada by lengthening the working hours of the poulity. By means of artificial light, they are kept at work scratching gravel, long after sunset. Before this capitalistic method of increasing output came into vogue, the hens retired to roost as soon as the dusk of evening set in. They stayed up on the perch. too, peacefully until daylight.

Surely, nothing so base as electric light would be tolerated to keep the willing birds working overtime in the communist state. Other disturbances in the domestic relations of capitalist poultry have become popular in recent years. But it may be found, after the Soviet poultry exhibits are seen, that people in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics are much like the Union of Soviet So the people who keep poultry in capitalistic countries.

By AUSTIN H. CLARK.

Haif a century ago it was believed that silk could be profitably produced from the cocoons of the polyphemus moth, which for that reason is sometimes called the American silk-worm moth. But the promise of the early successes has not been fuifilled.

On one estate in 1865 not less than a million of the huge caterpillars of this moth could be seen feding in the open air on scrub oak bushes covered with nets; five acres of woodland were swarming with them. But this thriving colony was wiped out by a disease imported in the eggs of an allied moth through Paris from Japan.

from Japan.

The cocoons of the polyphemus are oval in shape and tough and dense, and closed at each end. Within there is a spacious cavity with finely polished sides in which the pupa lies. Usually the cocoons are spun between two leaves and in the Autumn fall to the ground with them. They are frequently to be seen on the sidewalks in our towns, and sometimes even in our cities.

Sometimes the caterpillar runs a band of silk up the stems of one or both of the leaves which are thus attached securely to the twig. You see these occasionally in the Winter when, the trees are bare.

The silk of the polyphemus is of good quality, with a very strong and glossy fibre.

A THOUGHT

Judge not according to the appearance.-John vil., 24. Polished brass will pass upon more people than ought gold.—Chesterfield.

Do You Mean What You Say?

"Thirty" is an old telegraphers signals, of uncertain origin, in general use for more than half a century to denote the end of a piece of newspaper copy. Years ago compositors in the printing shops became so used to using "30" to designate "the end" of a piece of telegraph copy that they adopted it as a symbol of the finish of all pieces of type composition. To write "thirty" at the end of a man's life is literally to set the last line of his oblituary.

The reindeer industry in Alaska has proved so profitable that Lomen & Co. alone ship annually 10,000 carcases that bring a higher price than beef in the cities of the United States. Inspired by Stefansson; the Hudson's Bay Company has leased for raising-reindeer the southern half of Baffin Island—an area, the size of the British lales. "We are forcing our children too fast in education," said Dr. J. O. Mackay of the Provincial Asylum for the Insane, New Westminster. "It is plain that the age at which young people arrive at the universities is much earlier than a generation or two ago." he said.

This carblazed the way for the motor industry and started the movement for good roads everywhere. It is still the pioneer car in many parts of the world which are just beginning to be motorized. But conditions in this country have so greatly changed, that further refinement in motor car construction is now desirable, and our new model is a recognition of this. Be- sides the Model T itself, another revo- lutionary element which the Ford Mo- tor Company introduced twenty years ago was the idea of service. "The Model T was one of the largest factors in creating the conditions which now make the new model Ford possible. The world-wide influence of the Ford car in the building of good roads and in teaching the people the use and value of mechanical power is conceded. Nowadays everybody runs some kind of motor power, but twenty years ago only the adventurous few could be induced to try an automobile. "We began work on this new model several years ago. In fact, the idea of a new car has been in my mind much longer than that. But the sale of the Model T continued at such a pace that there never seemed to be an opportun- ity to get the new car started. "At present, I can only say this about the new model—it has speed, style, flexibility and control in traf-	the opening to noon. The Christian Endeavor Society has been recognized by church leaders as one of the principal agencies for the enlistment of recruits for the ministry, both for pastorates and the missionary fields. It has been the forerunner of other young people's movement, including the Epworth Leagus, the Luther League and the Baptist Young People's Union, all formed along lines laid down by Dr. Clark for the first Christian Endeavor Society.

FIRST WORDS IN FRANCE RECORDED

1867 . DIAMOND JUBILEE SERIES 1927 This War Memorial stands in Canadian Pacific Stations in Montreal (Windsor Station), in Winnspeg, and in Vancouver.

HE founders of the Canadian Pacific Railway well knew that the road which they planned would be not merely a great nation-building force in time of peace, but a powerful engine of defence in the Empire's day of need. Their faith was more than vindicated in 1914-18.

At the first rumors of war, the resources of the Canadian Pacific Railway were immediately turned over to the defenders of liberty and the Empire.

Both Atlantic and Pacific fleets co-operated with the transcontinental railway, its rolling stock, its shops, its terminal elevators and all its varied mechanism, for moving supplies.

Through its connections with United States Railways, and with the asset of its experienced personnel, the Canadian Pacific became at once a powerful auxiliary of the Allies' War Machine.

On the sea, the Company had special opportunities of service. Perhaps no more romantic story is to be found in naval annals than that of the Empress of Russia and her exploits on the Seven Seas. The Company's ships transported safely overseas from 1914 to 1918 more than 14,000,000 tons of supplies.

The total number of the Company's employees joining the army was 10,187. The Canadian Pacific allowed six months' full pay to each employee voluntarily enlisting, and let it be known that such men would be taken back into the service on their return.

All troop trains were handled with a skill which the military authorities characterized as "truly amazing." At all times the entire organization of the Railway was at the disposal of the Government.

Returned soldiers taken into employment up to the end of 1920 numbered 18,000 men, of whom more than 11,000 were in addition to the former employees who came back into the service.
